What I Will Cover

- Discuss and demonstrate ways we've used Adobe Connect at University of Minnesota.
- Creative ways to use web conferencing apps.

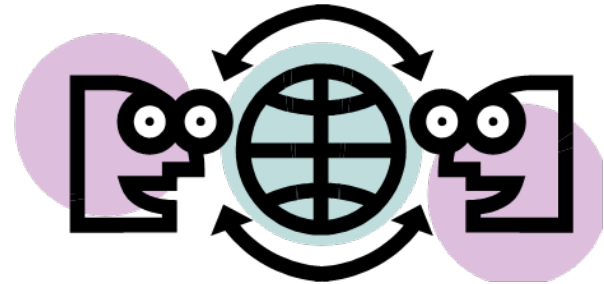

What is Adobe Connect?

- Web communication system primarily for web conferencing – formerly Macromedia Breeze.
- Branded as UMConnect at University of Minnesota.
- University of Minnesota has an institution-wide license and hosts a server.
- All U of M affiliates can set up and run meetings.

How we use it

- Record live classes.
- Online consultations for distance students.
- Narrated PowerPoint presentations for online learning.
- Staff meetings.
- Synchronous classes.

What equipment did we need?

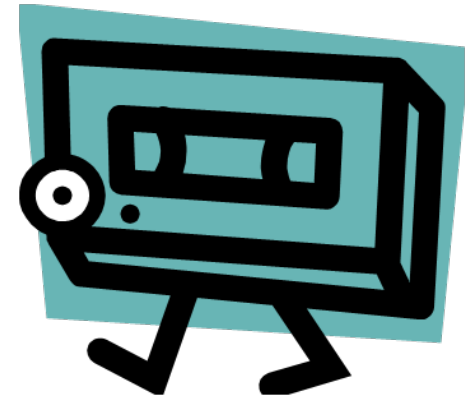

Sony WCS-999 wireless microphone system

- Approximately $150
- Simple to use
- Great sound quality

Class recordings

- Our first use of UMConnect (began in 2006).
- Let a web meeting run in the background to utilize recording feature.
- Captures voice and screen action.
- Link instantly available when recording is stopped.

Pros and Cons

Yay! 😊

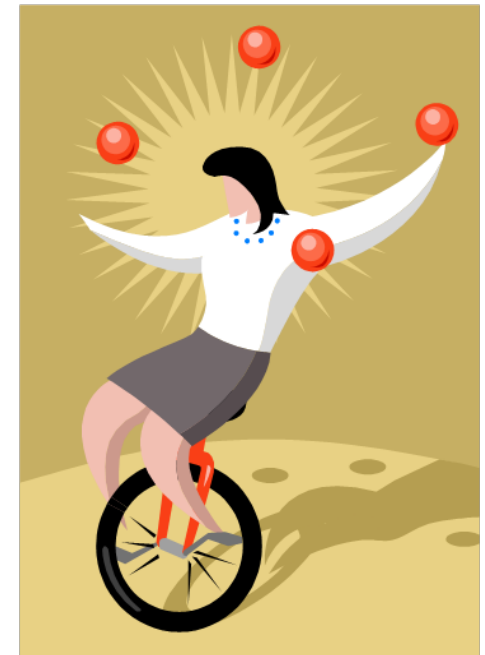

- ❑ Easy! Fun!
- ❑ Instantly available on University server.
- ❑ Minimal equipment needed.
- ❑ Works on any computer.

Boo! 😞

- ❑ Can't edit recordings.
- ❑ Can't embed video.
- ❑ Lots of little things to forget (like turning on microphone!)
- ❑ Outtakes

Live classes and presentations

- Monthly all-staff meetings are webcast so people can view from desks if necessary.
- Good for presentation-based meetings.
- Also works for online classes.

Web consultations

- Talk by phone, share web room – can see screen.

- Has become very popular.

- Makes phone conversations more efficient.

Legal Battle Brews Over Availability of Texts on Online Reserve at U. of California Library

By SCOTT CARLSON

Publishers are objecting to an electronic reserve system at the University of California in which libraries scan portions of books and journals and make them available free online to students.

In recent months, lawyers for the Association of American Publishers have sent letters to the university that object to the use of electronic reserves on the San Diego campus. The publishers say that the use of electronic reserves is too extensive, violating the fair-use doctrine of copyright law and depriving them of sales.

University officials counter that the electronic reserves at San Diego are well within the bounds of fair use. They worry that the letters portend a lawsuit.

"They clearly had a lawsuit in mind when they started contacting our office," said Mary MacDonald, a lawyer for the university system. "Their position was that the 'evidence' showed that we weren't following fair-use guidelines, that this was a national issue, and that the set of facts gave them a good platform from which to take legal action."

Id said she sent a "comprehensive response" to the association in February, laying out how the electronic reserves respected fair use. She said she had not heard from the publishers since then.

vice president for legal and governmental affairs at the publishing group, said the university's

Why does this all matter?

- Resources will always be stretched.
- Our time is the least scalable resource.
- Can use existing tools in creative ways to extend our reach.
- Or, invent a cloning machine.
